Winter weather made a brief appearance in late November. Night time temperatures dipped into the low 40s with cool days averaging from the high 60s to low 70s. The first week of December will be warm with temperatures back in the 80s. The two week forecast shows day time temperatures in the 70s. Great time to settle in front of the fireplace with a glass of Bacanora.

Last month we featured the rustic furniture of "Eddy" Leon. This month we are featuring the art of Rosa Maria Verdugo and Baranice Lopez. These are the artists who painted the hotel's two murals depicting the Mexican Revolution.

They also painted the passageway to the parking area and transformed it with flattened glass marbles and fabric butterflies. It is no longer just a boring hallway but an interesting and fun discovery for our guests.

Rosa Maria also hand-paints ceramics, landscapes and figures. She and Baranice also paint signs for various businesses in the area.

The Dia de Revolucion Parade featured several school bands and floats. Lynn and I were honored to be asked to be part of panel judging the parade. Check the web site for photos (as always, "coming soon")

So come on down. We promise there will be lots of warm, friendly people, good food and good weather.

Dream, Discover and Explore.
